Monthly Commentary

The Alpha Growth Fund delivered a total return of 0.82% (net of fees) in June 2023, which was below the Morningstar Australian Growth Target Allocation Index by -0.81% and below the Peer Group Median by -0.53%.

The decision to favour International/US Shares over Australian Shares made a positive contribution. The major contributor was the overweight positions in US Technology shares including Apple, NVIDIA, Meta Platforms and Amazon. The US Technology sector has rallied throughout 2023 and remains the key overweight position in the Fund, and we believe the long-term earnings growth potential of Artificial Intelligence, semiconductors and robotics remains attractive.

Within Australian shares, the main positives were positions in miners, including BHP and Rio Tinto. Australian Resources companies continue benefit from a higher inflation environment and their share prices rose in June despite a softer Chinese economy.

The Fund's exposure to gold miners, Gold Road Resources and Northern Star Resources, and to a weaker $US, detracted from performance, as investors adopted a more positive mindset in June and moved away from positions in more defensive assets.

For the Fund's exposure to Fixed Income, we favoured Australian/US bonds which also detracted from performance for the month. Australian bond prices fell as a result of the RBA's unexpected 0.25% interest rate increases in May and June.

The main changes to the Fund implemented over the month were increasing the exposure to Large US Technology shares (inc. Apple, Amazon & NVIDIA). In Australia reducing the exposure to large Australian Resources shares (inc. BHP & Rio Tinto) and Australian Banks (inc. ANZ, Westpac and NAB). Also, we further diversified the portfolio adding some smaller companies with attractive growth outlooks and/or superior valuations (inc. Corporate Travel Management, NIB, Netwealth & Perpetual).

While the Fund remains overweight to International Shares, we have a cautious mindset due to the higher risk of an economic recession over the next 12 months. As a consequence, we preference higher quality businesses which are less sensitive to economic weakness and sectors with more sustainable long-term growth profiles such as Technology and Healthcare. In Fixed Interest, the Fund has exposure to longer-dated Australian and US bonds which will outperform if the economy slows.
